

Why I want to be a CSP officer? The late Prime of Pakistan, Liaqat Ali Khan, once said,

The idea behind the movement of Pakistan was not just to add one more country to the conglomeration of countries in the world, rather the Muslims of the Subcontinent wanted to secure a territory where they can practise Islam.

Unfortunately, after 76 years of independence we have failed in turning our forefathers' dream into reality. Corruption and Injustice are an integral part of our society. Everyone in this state is playing a role in damaging the integrity and sovereignty of this state. The political stability and economic turmoil this state has been facing since its birth is making it a "Paranoidistan"—as stated by Ayesha Jalal in "Pakistan: beyond the crisis state"—internationally. We are blaming the US and other actors for our current condition and we are not ready to accept our flaws. How can we become an Islamic state? We need people who shouldn't work for themselves but for the state, who should serve as a barrier against those damaging the state - The people who have sufficient knowledge and skills to secure Pakistan's national interest and sovereignty, be they bureaucrats, politicians or military personnel. If anyone wants to participate in a car race, he needs a car with a running engine. The bureaucrats in Pakistan are this engine which is running the state. They are ~~people~~ who have sufficient knowledge and ability to critically analyze a situation, based on the information they acquire during their quest to be a bureaucrat. They can serve as people who can work for political stability and economic independence of Pakistan - They can keep this crippling state alive. That's why I want to be a bureaucrat.
