Why do I want to become a bureaucrate?

Becoming a bureaucrate is paramount for me. It provides me an ample opportunity to play my vital role in development of my country. Indeed, it is human capital upon which progress of any country depends. I can utilize my critical and cognitive thinking ability to resolve problems of my state. Nevertheless, there are motives behind my desire to become a bureaucrate.

First, it is the dream of my parents that one of their children join bureaucracy. Being eldest child of my parents, it is my responsibility to fulfill their dream. By joining bureaucracy, I can be a reason for their pride. Second, to serve the country ^{effectively}, I have to be a part of administrative machinery of it. With the help of my problem-solving, analytical reasoning, and objective evaluation skills, I can be fruitful in transforming the administrative process.

Third, bureaucracy can provide me job security which any other job lacks. Job security provides enough satisfaction required for focused work. Moreover, through it, I can be free from income insecurity.

Last, I want to challenge taboos of society by entering into bureaucracy as a female bureaucrat. Owing to prevalent gender disparity, ^{it} is believed that a girl cannot do what a boy can do.

Thus, I have desire to prove them wrong. In a nutshell, by becoming a bureaucrate, I can attain my objectives of fulfilling dream of my parents,

-serving my country, securing

job, and challenging taboos of the society.
