Title:-

Beyond Discipline: How to Deal with Children

Indent the paragraph.

Present-day educational experts are tilted towards letting the children be as they desire, ignoring the optimistic view of being with them. You can get the children to agree with you with less complaints and more willingness. A child has no desire for social or political endeavours. Teachers who enjoy children's company will involve themselves but only where <sup>what is certain?</sup> is certain. Sadly, this overburdened profession makes it difficult for teachers to interact with students affectionately. Two hours a day should be enough for education rather making it an <sup>full time</sup> entire profession. Youth today are tiring out which results in irritation. One cannot make rules beforehand on how to deal with children. If the child feels loved then no rules can be alternative for care and sensitivity.
