

Benefits of Reading

Outline

- ★ Introduction
- ★ Why it is important
- ★ Conclusion

★ Francis Bacon a father of essay once said "Reading maketh a fullman".

Happy is the man who make reading its habit. He has a life-long pleasure, when he has his beloved books.

★ A good reader always a leader. When a wise man is free he does not spend his time in reading and learning rather than in other time wasting activities. Ruskin said "Kings' treasures"-treasuries filled, not with gold and silver and precious stones, but with riches much more valuable than these - Knowledge, noble thoughts and high ideals.

★ An intellectual person in society is the one who have the words of great books. Whenever a man get tired from work load, he must study the books of his own choice that gives him pleasure and relax his mind.

★ In reading man is not bound he can read whether it is fiction or non-fiction, but reading fiction is like eating nothing but cakes and sweets. As we need food to live in same way our mind needs reading to be fresh.

★ In a nut shell, we can say that our friend or loved one may leave us but books are always waiting for us to open them and increase in our knowledge.
