The author believes that the company of children should be enjoyed rather than focusing on the negative side of interfering with them. If one has genuine affection for Children, they will be responsive to the provided suggestions and it is easier to guide their behaviour. The attachment with children should be natural and free from any hidden motives. There should not be interference in Children's Freedom by the teachers. Teachers contact with children should be limited to Two-Hours per day to maintain a liking for children. Without doubt, dealing with children is tiresome without strict discipline ~~[illegible]~~ but no rules are a substitute for affection. Hence, true affection mitigates the need for strictness.
