Title: Sustainable development: Co-existence of Urban and natural life

The city green areas appears as a sigh of relief in hectic urban routine, providing a wonderful amalgamation of nature with development. Alongside aestheticism, they play a vital role in improving community bonds and also serves for the promotion of culture and sports. These are also important for good air quality which leads to good physical and mental health.

In an era of urbanization, it's of grave importance to create a balance between concrete and green areas by cultivation through different techniques. So, it creates a harmonious cohabitation between progress and nature.
