

The sentiments.

As human beings we are distinguished from other creatures by a unique quality-sentiments. It is considered to be the base of a developing society. Brutality, violence, gender discrimination, murdering, and many other such enormous inhumanity acts are increasing in societies with lackness of sentiments. The question arises, how would we understood, do we have sentiments? The answer is very transparent and accessible. Did you have ask a question solely once to yourself, what is going on in the society and what i am responding it? What is my contribution toward it? Have you once asked yourself? Each day, 25000 people, including more than 10000 children die from hunger. Have you thought this estimate might include ratio of your's society? And many more who are not taking their education, drug addicts, and thise innocent lives who are killing in conflicts and terrorism. In a nut shell, a man should evoke their unique quality of sentiments and consider it his obligation-not to do bad with others nor to allow others to do so.