

Date:

Freedom in Education

There are three prevalent viewpoints on the Freedom in education. The first viewpoint supports complete autonomy regardless of the conduct. The second viewpoint advocates authority. The third one supports freedom while expecting moral perfection from the children. However, due to the individualistic nature of the third viewpoint, the author disagrees with it. The idea that freedom ensures moral perfection is flawed. Our communal existence requires co-operation, which will not appear overnight. It is impossible for children to learn these things by themselves. Therefore, it is important that the mere focus of education should not only be on providing growth opportunities, but also on moral development.

main idea is picked and discussed over all content is fine basic grammar and sentence structure is satisfactory 9/20
good work

Words in Passage : 310

Words in Precs : 106

Date:

Greek gods and their oracles

When human-beings realized their meagerness in this vast universe, they felt a need to establish a connection with god. God's wishes served as a guide for humans. In ancient Greece, these wishes were interpreted by "soothsayers". They delivered their oracles by interpreting and observing the details of the nature. Sometimes, instead of giving signs, gods directly delivered their message to the intermediates. Then they would go in the state of ecstasy and forward that message to the people. This is how the ancient greek oracles operated. Each oracle was associated to a specific place and a certain god. At times, god themselves were the soothsayers for other gods; one such was Appollo. Who delivered the message of Zeus through it's oracles at delphi.

Words in Passage = Approx: 360

Words in Preciis = 123.