

18-5-24

Precis CSS 2010

MTWTFSS

DATE: _____

Envy: Impediment to Happiness

The most negative characteristic of human being is envy which makes one unhappy. Instead of enjoying one's own blessings, an envious person feels painful by seeing others advantages. If he can deprive others of their blessings, he would definitely do it to make them alike to him. Envy finds no answer to questions that why one should strive for the welfare of others, however admiration is present in human nature. One must lessen envy to increase human prosperity. Selflessness and happiness are the available treatments, for envy, for saints and ordinary human respectively, but the problem ^{behind} is that envy is an obstacle to happiness. Envious man, on the other hand, may say that he feels envy and cannot find happiness one tell him that he cannot end envious till he find happiness, but real life is not as logical as this. One should realize to take step towards curing one's own envious feelings.

Number of words: 155

Q 6 (b) Change the narration:

- 1) On Monday he said that his son was coming that day.
- 2) They said, "Where he is going next week."
- 3) He ~~said~~ ^{asked} ~~that~~ ^{if} she went the previous day.
- 4) He swore that he did not know her nickname.
- 5) He says, "We are to meet him at the station."
- 6) He said that he don't know the way, ask the old man sitting on the gate.
- 7) My father said, "May you recover from your illness!"
- 8) He asked ^{that} how would he manage it.