In what movie was the villain actually right? Ephialtes from action film 300. He betrays Leonidas and leads the Persian army on a secret path, allowing them to surround and ultimately defeat the Spartan group. I will not argue that his actions are right or wrong per se, but that they are understandable, do not constitute betrayal and do not make Ephialtes evil. Let's look at the events leading up. It is established in the opening scene that Spartan men are born to be soldiers, and any newborn with a less than perfectly fully abled body is immediately discarded. Not set on a different path, like farming, blacksmithing or whatever, but full on chucked in a ditch. Ephialtes was supposed to be one of these discarded babies, but his parents, loving their son beyond his twisted body, decided they would rather flee Sparta and live in the shadows than to have him killed. Ephialtes then spends his life in hiding, training with his father, working to become a good soldier, hoping that he may, one day, serve the very people that rejected him.

Finally, when the opportunity comes, Ephialtes follows Leonidas and the 300 and manages to get an audience with the King. He kneels in front of Leonidas, tells him his story and begs him to be allowed to join the fight. He knows the 300 are basically on a suicide mission, but it does not matter to him. He just wants to have a noble death, to be accepted as one of them, and to "earn his father's armor".

And after all that, and in spite of having "a good spear", Leonidas turns him down. Leonidas claims Ephialtes' inability to raise his shield is detrimental to a phalanx, where each soldier defends the one on his left.

Hell, I bet if Leonidas just had given him his blessing to charge the Persian army alone, he would have done it to have a good death and take a few Persians with him. But no, after proving his loyalty and his "good spear" skills, Ephialtes is once again rejected. He is again cast aside.

Only then, completely broken and with nowhere to go, does he go to Xerxes. He is being offered all the riches he desires to join the Persian side, which he accepts, but on top of the generic "wealth and power" he asks for the one thing that he really wanted: a uniform. He was never motivated by greed. And he never committed betrayal, as he was never accepted by Sparta to begin with.

Q. 3 Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

General George S. Patton was a controversial figure in American military history, known for his aggressive tactics and outspoken views. One of his most famous statements was his belief that the United States had defeated the wrong enemy in World War II and that they should have pushed straight to Moscow instead. This view is explored in a variety of sources, including books and articles.

One book that examines Patton's perspective is "Patton: A Biography" by Alan Axelrod. According to Axelrod, Patton believed that the Soviet Union posed a greater threat to American interests than Nazi Germany. He believed that the United States should have focused its efforts on defeating the Soviets rather than the Nazis, arguing that the Soviet Union was a more dangerous and long-term threat to American freedom and democracy.

Another source that explores Patton's views is a 2015 article in the National Interest titled "What If Patton Had Captured Moscow?" In the article, author Michael Peck discusses the potential implications of a hypothetical scenario in which Patton had pushed all the way to Moscow. Peck notes that while such a move would have been risky and difficult, it could have significantly altered the outcome of the war and potentially prevented the Cold War from ever happening.

Overall, General Patton's belief that the United States defeated the wrong enemy and should have pushed straight to Moscow is a controversial and thought-provoking perspective on World War II. While some historians criticize Patton for his views, others argue that his willingness to think outside the box and challenge conventional wisdom is a valuable lesson for leaders in any field.

جب ٹائٹنک ڈوبا تو اس میں کروڑ پتی جان جیکب ایسٹر چہارم سوار تھے۔ اس کے بینک اکاؤنٹ میں موجود رقم 30 ٹائٹنکس بنانے کے لیے کافی تھی۔ تاہم، جان لیوا خطرے کا سامنا کرتے ہوئے، اس نے وہی انتخاب کیا جسے وہ اخلاقی طور پر درست سمجھتا تھا اور دو خوفزدہ بچوں کو بچانے کے لیے لائف بوٹ میں اپنی جگہ چھوڑ دی۔

ڈیپارٹمنٹل سٹورز کی سب سے بڑی امریکی چین کے شریک مالک ایسٹور اسٹراس، "میسیز" جو ٹائی ٹینک پر بھی تھے، نے کہا: "میں دوسرے مردوں سے پہلے کبھی بھی لائف بوٹ میں داخل نہیں ہوں گا۔"

اس کی اہلیہ، ایڈا اسٹراس نے بھی لائف بوٹ پر سوار ہونے سے انکار کر دیا، اور اس کی جگہ اپنی نوکرانی ایلن برڈ کو دے دی۔ اس نے زندگی کے آخری لمحات اپنے شوہر کے ساتھ گزارنے کا فیصلہ کیا۔ ان دولت مند افراد نے اپنے اخلاقی اصولوں پر سمجھوتہ کرنے کے بجائے اپنی دولت اور یہاں تک کہ اپنی جانوں سے بھی الگ ہونے کو ترجیح دی۔ اخلاقی اقدار کے حق میں ان کا انتخاب انسانی تہذیب اور انسانی فطرت کی شان کو اجاگر کرتا ہے۔
