

(C) Faith in Afterlife:

Faith in afterlife is an integral part of Islam. No Muslim can claim to be true Muslim without believing in afterlife. Faith in afterlife means that being a Muslim one believes that the death in this world is not the eventuality of a human but a mere transfer from this realm to the other realm, where human will be given rebirth to account for one's deeds in this world. Being a Muslim we believe that whatever we do in this world, we shall be answerable before Allah Almighty. Although faith in afterlife is not unique with Muslims because all followers of Abrahamic religions also believe in this concept but Islam is the one religion who gives the logical and comprehensive explanation. Islam defines all stages of afterlife from rebirth to granting of Paradise or Hell. Faith in afterlife is not only a mere or belief but a vital tool for betterment of human attitudes. This concept is so powerful that it dictates each and every step of the life of a believer. On one hand this helps a believer to get through daily hardships of life by promising an eternal reward in the form of Jannah while on the other hand it keeps a believer in check and forbids to commit any immoral or unethical deed by inducing fear to Hell. When a believer try to do any acts which are not allowed in religion then this faith bars him to do it by inducing fear of accountability in front of Allah Almighty. In short, Faith in afterlife is an integral part of Islam which helps a human to stay human.

Title: D.H Lawrence and his philosophy

Precis:

The author states that he was believer of democracy while D.H. Lawrence was not. According to D.H. Lawrence a common man should only be able to elect superiors with limited scope and powers. Not presidents but kings should be elected. Although D.H. Lawrence thinking was not only far from reality but he also did not try to preach his ideals either through a book or public addresses. Gradually author discovered <sup>that</sup> D.H. Lawrence was not serious about making world a better place according to his philosophy but only wanted to feel holy by blaming world.
