

Preis 2013

Title: Colonialism and social structure of Society

There are two main cultural aspect of human society. Both formal and ideological aspects are basic components of social structure of any society. There is an organic link between cultural aspects and social structure of any society. The social problems of underdeveloped countries are the result of colonialism. Feudal societies before imperialist arrival were rich in culture. Political subjugation was the reason behind stagnation of these societies. Both feudal and tribal societies were in the state of war. There were two division by colonialist master i.e vertical and horizontal. This is fundamental social and cultural structure of former colonies left behind the coloniser.