

My aim in life.

It was a happy day of Eid-ul-Fitr, when I was born. While experiencing life, ~~and~~ ~~the~~ accepting many challenges and facing more critical situations, I decided that life needs a soul purpose to spent. Similarly, once when I was watching tv channel a report was screened by the UNICEF that states, "an estimated 153 million children worldwide are orphans."

I was deeply fallen into disappointment that how these children ~~will~~ will live ~~and~~ without their parents. On that moment, I promised myself to establish an organisation, which will provide a well nourished atmosphere to these homeless children.

To accomplish this dream, I have decided a career through which I can easily have an access to run this organisation. For that, I have decided/chooseⁿ that I will undergo through many competitive examinations. After passing in these examinations, a person have healthy public relations which will help him to collect welfare funds and charity to run the organisation smoothly. Therefore, it is a famous saying that, "to feed a hungry is more sacred than to perform pilgrimage".