In present-day world, women participation in all sphere of a country's life has become an indispensable necessity. The societies where women are less empowered and neglected are themselves testament to the fact that such places are devoid of real progress, be that economic, social or political. On the contrary, all those countries which / that have laid emphasis on empowering women are reaping delicious dividends. Unfortunately, women are not well-empowered in Pakistan. They are widely seen as dependent on men. Once women empowerment is ensured, it will definitely provide unimaginable pavement benefits. Of those, the boost to country's fragile economy is most noticeable. Similarly, women empowerment will raise the effectiveness of judiciary. Above all, empowered women leads a strong upbringing of their children, thereby making the country's future bright and prosperous. Given these copious upsides of women empowerment, it is necessary for Pakistan to work on empowering women. To this end, the country can take a wide range of measures. Amongst them make sure that women have accessibility and affordability of education is utmost important.

Moreover, it must put an end to the prevailing practice of underage marriages of girls. It is also necessary to seek role of media in promotion of women empowerment in the patriarchal society of Pakistan. In fact, women empowerment is unavoidable to gain prosperity for Pakistan.

Basically, the concept of women empowerment is all about making women self-sufficient and self-reliant, independent in their decision making. Historically, women have been treated as mere subjects and property of man. They were deprived of their all rights and made subservient to men. However, the societies advanced later on and they realized the crucial need of empowering women so that they could also contribute in the development of societies. This phenomenon intensified manifold after the advent of industrial era. The need of having women's contribution became an inevitable necessity ever after. Moreover, the rise in technology has also prompted countries to empower so that a greater dividend can be reaped. In the present world, women's involvement in a country's all affairs is irreplaceably important.

The following paragraphs will discuss how women empowerment ~~can~~ can lead to prosperity the Pakistani society.

First of all, women empowerment will boost Pakistan's fragile and problem-riddled economy. At present, the country's economy is showing dismal performance. Most of its pain is emanating due to poor export. It is leading to the current account deficit, draining fast the foreign exchange reserves and putting pressure on the currency. However, if women are sufficiently empowered and they participate in country's economic activities, it will largely relieve its economic woes. Today, Bangladesh is enjoying the great dividends of empowering women. The country's textile sector is a significant home to women employment, thereby empowering them financially. It is because of women empowerment in this sector that the country is generating hefty revenues in textile export. Thus, empowering women will help Pakistan strengthen its weak economy.

Besides uplifting economy, women empowerment will make the country's judiciary more effective and efficient. There is no denying to the fact that judiciary in the country is rife with plethora of problems. This institution is lackadaisical in providing justice to the masses. Impartiality and merit of judgement is often questioned. Above all, it is the less representation of women in the judiciary that is hurting its performance. According to the report of Law and Justice Commission of Pakistan, there are only seven judges in superior courts as compared to males who constitute 121 figure. This under-representation of women in the judiciary is due to their less and inadequate empowerment. Once women are sufficiently empowered and they become part of judiciary in a larger number, this institution will become more effective and stronger.

When women are empowered, it leads them to do better upbringing of their children, thereby making the country's future bright and prosperous. How can a woman who is herself subjugated and dependent in decision making will rear her children in strong manner. It is true that children of those women who are adequately empowered are high esteemed and they see higher rise in their lives. Islam has consistently emphasized on education to all regardless of gender because education leads to self-realization and self empowerment. The Prophet said, 'To seek knowledge is obligatory upon all.' Thus, it is an educated and self-empowered empowered mother who can do an astounding and immaculate upbringing of her children and these are the children who go on to become fine assets their country. Therefore, Pakistan's future will be full of prosperity if the country has well empowered women.

In the paragraphs above, it was discussed that how women empowerment will push Pakistan towards prosperity. While the subsequent paragraphs will shed light on the several actions that Pakistan can undertake in order to empower women so that it can realize prosperity and progress.

The first and foremost solution to empower women in Pakistan is to ensure free education to them with easy accessibility. Pakistan is an under-developed country with per-capita income somewhere near $1500. Considering the inflation level and increased financial needs for every family in Pakistan, it is difficult for people to allow their female children to get education. There is no denying to the fact that it has become very difficult for parents to get education to their boys nowadays. To easily bear educational expenses for their children, many families make sacrifice of girls' education. Thus, to empower women, it is essential to make education accessible and affordable to women in Pakistan.

Along with educating women, it is also equally required to liberate Pakistani society of the prevailing menace of early marriages. There is no doubt on the fact that early marriages ruin women's lives. Not only do they bear pains of various medical complications, but their social growth also get stunted. In this regard, it is essential for Pakistan to overhaul the article pertaining to girls marriage in the constitution that allows marriage of a 16 years girl. Moreover, it is required to formulate implementable laws with regards to ensuring free-will of women in their marriage and curtail the undue latitude of male in this regard. Thus, it is necessary to end early marriages of girls to raise women empowerment in Pakistan.

Women's education and early marriages of girls are indeed haunting factors for Pakistan, to improve their education and restrain early marriages, it is very important to push media to play its role for also to promote women empowerment. In recent times, media has emerged as a formidable tool to bring change in societies. With its help, a lot of Unthinkable things have been achieved in society. This points to the fact that media can become an essential catalyst in promoting women empowerment in Pakistan. There has been an immense rise in media usage in the Pakistani society, which surely entails a good opportunity for Pakistani government to achieve its purpose ~~of~~ creating general awareness in the society as with regards to the much-needed women empowerment.

In a nutshell, empowering women will enable to not only become prosperous but also reduce social crimes. Women empowerment will help the country achieve economic prosperity. Besides, it will make the country's problem-riddled judiciary system stronger and more effective. Similarly, well-empowered women will lead the generation to contribute in the development of the country. However, it is true that the task of empowering women is herculean and arduous. Nonetheless, with well-calculated steps, it is going to get much easier. To this end, the government must ensure affordability and accessibility of education to women. Similarly, it must overcome the taint of prevalent early marriages of young girls. Along with these, the role of social media is also a necessity. With achieving the coveted goal of women empowerment, the country will achieve greater prosperity in all domains.
