

Past perfect Tense

For Grammar

Ashley has moved to Murree recently. Her real name is Ayesha but her family calls her with the name of Ashley. Akbar ~~has~~ ^{is} also posted there.

They got married last year. They have been working so hard and ^{finally} got promoted. Recently, it has snowed in Ayesha's place. Ashley always ~~has love~~ ^{loves} to play in the snow. Akbar ~~has~~ never been through this experience (of snow). Last night, she called, and she was telling her family ~~at~~ that how she has ^{been} enjoying ~~to play~~ ^{playing} in the snow.

Today, they have to go to a junction. Ayesha had bought a white color dress for this junction. Akbar has planned to surprise Ayesha with the same color dress (like her). Ayesha has been waiting for him to ~~get~~ ^{come} back and get ready for the junction. She called him after thirty minutes of wait. "I am going to the junction, I am ~~not~~ ^{not} going to wait for you ~~no~~ ^{any} longer!" she switched off her phone. After five minutes, the bell rings. She opened the door and (got) surprised "Hurrah!" She ^{has} holded his arm and went for the junction. They were looking good in the junction. The best couple someone ever see.

She told me the whole story in the junction. Every eye of the junction was looking at them. Last month, they went for a Dubai trip. She ^{has} shown me the pictures of the trip. (There were on Burj Khalifa for two days) They have been to stay twice. She has captured all the memories in her phone. They are ^{planning} to (got) go for the next trip. They might go to Europe this time.

God, has been very kind to them and this ^{is} all ^{just} because of her good heart. This is how she raised by her parents, to respect elders and to compromise with the people, especially with her husband in critical conditions.

Mistakes identified.