Nizar Hassan was born in 1960. He studied anthropology and worked in TV. In 1994, he filmed "Independence" to criticise the bizarre Israeli notion of "independence". As Israel was planning to annex ~~some~~ more parts of Palestine, he informed the writer about his latest film, My Grandfather's Path. They say choose your enemies carefully because, for instance, if you are opposing Zionist settler colonists, you would soon become like them and forget yourself. ~~The~~ Aspects of Palestinian, world cinema, and drama reminded the writer about the politics and saved him from that trap. Nizar Hassan's new documentary, which is about Israel's encroachment on Palestinian rights and the world's complicity, is an ode to his homeland. A shorter version of the film has been broadcast on Al Jazeera Arabic in three parts, but it must be seen in one go.
