Title :- Tour to Qualla Boundary of Cherokee

During author's vacation last May, it was difficult to find any exciting and fascinating holiday spot where peace can be found. Suggestion of trip to Cherokee, a county in Oklahoma, was given by John. Then they went to Cherokee and visited a town, Qualla boundary, which was surrounded by beautiful mountains and hills and these mountains represent Cherokee past to the tourists. They visited the shops there and see the traditional things in the shops. They met an old man, George, who was fluent in English so they talked to him for a long time. They learnt that Cherokees does not depend on trade only and they try other means of survival like Bingo Weekend. The museum of Qualla boundary was their final stop and then came back and started planning for another trip.
