

Human as homosapiens sometime are known as homo faber — a creator. According to author, human can think and create only because they can speak. They first became good speakers then adapted ability to create and think. They would be an animal without language. Getting high intellect with speaking ability would like a desparate animal having abilities of human. Language was only thing that helped to preserve knowledge. Definatly, it was a one that created social, religious and legal values and established the civilized System. Title: Language and Human
