

"A Mirthful Trip to Cherokee"

The writer had a confusion of choosing tour during his vacations. Hence, his friend, John recommended him a trip to Cherokee. He agreed and took off flight to Cherokee. It was a scenic place. Despite of language barrier, they were led by natives to the souvenir shops, which were filled with tradition and cultural items. There, a middle aged man, named George, welcomed them. He told them means of income in Cherokee. He further exposed that trade was not enough, and events like Bingo weekend, where various games were played, fetched great return. The author's final stop was Qualla Boundary where cultural items were displayed. After returning, the writer missed the trip and wished for such another tour.

20

Final stop was at the museum.