

It is not luck but labour that makes men. Luck, says an American writer, is ever waiting for something to turn up: labour with keen eye and strong will always turns up something. Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy; labour turns out at six and with busy pen and ringing hammer lays the foundation of a competence. Luck whines; labour watches. Luck relies on chance; labour on character. Luck slips downwards to self-indulgence; labour strides upwards and aspires to independence. The conviction, therefore, is extending that diligence is the mother of good luck: in other words, that a man's success in life will proportionate to his efforts, to his industry, to his attention to small things.

Precis: Efforts make men successful rather than luck says an American author. Luck is dependent while hard-work independently out-shines. Luck is waiting for good while hard-work is to get-up and start <sup>working</sup> work. Luck leads to laziness, while efforts <sup>inspire</sup> inspires to liberty. Hard-work is mother of luck. <sup>It</sup> it will ensure success in life.

Title: Success proportionates to Efforts and labour. o
