

The development of Commerce in Europe.

The development of Commerce was a difficult task in Middle Ages. It was hindered due to lack of modern technology. If the traders had decided to send their goods in other areas of country. They had faced the danger of Sea pirates. However, the modern technology is making access of trade easy for every country. North ~~to~~ South trade were facing obstacles. Because they were not having better communication and transport facilities. Therefore, Government should impose the taxes on trader's products and will use this money for making ^{the} way safe for traders. After facing these difficulties, Europe and North enjoyed wealth and prosperity.
