

Title: A memorable trip to Cherokee

(A m) The author was facing difficulty in choosing an exciting tour. John suggested him to visit Cherokee a country in Oklahoma. After preparation, they departed to Cherokee and visited Qualla Boundary which is surrounded by glorious mountains views. It was presenting a short story of Cherokee past to the visitors. With the assistance of locals, they found souvenir shops which were filled with unique things. George, a middle-aged man, welcomed them and invited them for lunch. George told them about his work routine in that season and with heavy heart, how hardly he managed to earn his livelihood by cutting firewood. They came to know that Cherokee depends on trade and "Bingo weekend" for survival. In the last, they visited museum. The author missed this trip after returning back.