PRECIS 2019

The author criticizes the notion of educational theorists of mentioning flaws of interfering with children but ignoring the plus points of enjoying their company. The presence of children must be cherished. Teachers who possess such traits would have an edge over others. Over-burdened instructors are unable to formulate such a tender bond. Unruly youth can irritate an already tired person. Disobedient children can be tactfully handled and affectionately treated rather than based on fix rules.
