Nizar Hassan was born in 1960 and raised in ~~in~~ Mashhad village. He worked in TV post graduation. Later he shifted to cinema and produced Independence, in which he ridicules the Israeli concept of stealing other peoples' homeland and calling it independence. The author received an email from Nizar Hassan regarding his latest film, My Grandfathers' path, and included a link to director's cut. It stated to chase enemies wisely. They would soon become like the Zionist settlers and forget their ideas and aspirations. World cinema had provided him poetic salvation from such traps. Nazir Hassan's documentary was a masterstroke of art. The shorter version has been broadcasted but it must be viewed in one sitting.
