

Attitude make peace

Q.2 Peace is essential in a world where great powers maintain invulnerable nuclear forces and refuse to surrender without resorting to them. In today's world, a single nuclear weapon possesses nearly ten times the explosive force of all Allied air forces during World War II. In a world where nuclear weapons weapons could be carried globally, the annual expenditure on weapons to prevent their use is crucial for maintaining peace and preventing potential harm. The speaker argues that peace is not solely achieved through idle stockpiles, but rather through rational rational efforts to ensure it. The pursuit of peace is less dramatic than war, but urgent. Some argue that world peace, world law, and disarmament are useless until hostile nations adopt a more enlightened attitude.

The speaker encourage re-examining our own attitude towards peace, emphasizing the importance of fostering a positive outlook for all citizens, including graduates, who wish to bring peace. Emphasizes the importance of examining our attitude towards peace, arguing that it doesn't have to be impossible or unreal. By defining the goal more clearly and making it more manageable, we can inspire hope and drive progress towards peace.
