

DATE

—/—/— Precise

The pathway of rural development is obtain by developmental programmes. Also, the involvement of people and different measures is useful for better productivity. Despite the fact, rural areas are more popularized than urban. but rural areas have less per income capita. A large part of rural areas are always under employment and victim of poverty.

The talented majority migrated to the cities for more prosperous life.

The systematically development of rural lies in agricultural growth, water supply, village electrification and basic necessities of social life. The whole process is to provide productive life. Likewise, the rural heritage maintained by preservative, coherence and integration.

Topic: The rural development: An agent of social change.