(H) Conclusion

International order in world politics is established on the course of various states in it. If we have a cursory look over past, we could see a ~~two~~^{three} international order from early 20th century to early 21st century in the form of Multipolar, Bipolar and unipolar international order respectively. The new international order which is multipolar due to rising of Chinese power, Resurgence of Russia, and emerging of new economies. In this new international order emergence of new alliances namely, BRICS, SCO, G7, AUKUS, QUAD, BRI and IMEEC portend a repetition of history by engaging in to conflict like wise base in early 20th century, Allied power vs Axis Powers. As multipolarity leads to conflict. Moreover, Proxies wars in middle east portend a repetition of history as back in cold war era. So the new international order ~~and~~

History
portend repetition of. Yes, the new international order in form of multipolarity and emerging new alliances in form of BRICS, SCO, G7 AUKUS portend a repetition of history by engaging in to conflict, As it manifested back in Early and mid 20th century in the form of conflict among Allied and Axis Powers.

To conclude, yes, it is the new international order in the form of multipolarity, rising of nationalist leaders, indulging in to global conflict, be it proxy wars, clash of BRICS and G7 or attacking of Russia over Ukraine and emerging new alliances in the shape of political, economical, military or cultural, ~~pot~~ tend a repetition
