Climate Conditions Effecting
Man's Spirit

Temperate regions of North Europe suggests that cold weather was a positive impact on human nature. Extreme cold pushes man to endure difficulties for survival. Man engages himself into different activities in order to keep himself healthy. On the contrary, in tropical weather, less activities are required to work due to hot weather.

Different seasons has different impacts on human nature.

In hot weather, we tend to take life as easy, while in cold weather, our bodies and minds are more active.
