To resolve the mystery of life and overcome their fear, human beings tried to communicate with divine powers that were believed to control their fate and the universe. In ancient Greece, the soothsayers performed the job of interpreting the sign from the Gods whether the offering were accepted or not. However the signs were not sometimes clear, so the Oracles became the voice of Gods who delivered the message verbally in the state of ecstasy. Hence, the oracles were consulted to see the future. Consequently, different temples were reserved for oracles to communicate on behalf of God. One such was Apollo, the Greek God, who delivered the message of Zeus via its Oracle at Delphi.

( Oracles: The voice of the Gods )

To solve the problems, human beings communicated with divine powers. In ancient Greece, the soothsayers interpreted the acceptance of their offerings through Gods sign. Oracles, voice of Gods, conveyed the message when the signs were unclear. Thus, they showed interest to see the future. So, temples were given to oracles to convey Gods messages just as Apollo's oracles delivered the message of Zeus at Delphi.
