

Final Preci

Author thinks that modern educational theorists attach more with negative values of interaction with children rather than positive ones. Children will accept suggestions and avoid prohibitions if they sense an unconditional love. They will not be grateful on idea of liking them for achieving their own purposes. Teacher who has genuine interest in children does not interfere with their freedom. Over worked teachers cannot save their natural liking for children. Writer thinks that education should not be a profession. Busy individuals must enjoy children's company. Indiscipline in society causes fatigue which mostly teachers do not understand. Self control cannot save friendliness. Child will have affection for others if they sense love for them. Author concludes that rules are not necessary in affection with children.
