

Social contract of John Lock

John Lock gives the social contract theory. According to this theory, collective will of society forms law. If they obey laws it is helpful for them to secure their property and rights. These laws are formed by honest judges. According to law rulers and sovereign both are equal. No one can take the property of individual without his consent. Due to this contract soldiers and rights of laborers are equal. The people can be taxed only with their consent.

Total words = 243

Preise word = 86