

Social media has become a platform for conducting psychological warfare.

Psychological warfare is a type of war which impacts and manipulates human brain through information.

Psychological warfare through social media plays a lethal role in deceiving the public. Moreover, deception can even make people go against their own government.

A report published by United States Institute for Peace, stated that Russian major success in annexing Crimea was mainly due to its successful psychological warfare operations through social media.

Thus, psychological warfare is a major challenge for social media.

Psychological warfare is a negative and destructive outcome of social media.

Social media is also being used for spreading propaganda. Propaganda is a form of information which exaggerates a perspective to win support of people. Social media is being used by elites to influence the opinion of public.

In addition, propaganda also creates rift among the people of a country due to differing opinions.

According to Pakistan's news reports, India successfully spread propaganda against Pakistan and resultantly, Pakistan was put into Financial Action Task Force's (FATF) grey list. Thereby, propaganda
