How to Treat Children?

Modern educationalists agree on not interfering too much with children's freedom. Children are not like the pet animals that respond according to your will. They will not be happy if you set them according to your preference/desires. It can be useful, if someone enjoys the presence of children without any hidden purpose. Teachers can interfere the child's freedom but without causing emotional stress. Unfortunately, this is impossible for already burdened teachers. Teaching should not be anyone's whole profession, it should be just for two-hours, and for those, who spend the remaining day away from children. There should be a friendliness environment instead of strictness. Every decision will be right, if child feels happy.
