

The True Purpose of Education (CSS-2023)

There are three schools of thought:

complete freedom regardless of behaviour, complete authority regardless of qualities, and freedom with virtuous deeds, the last which ensures freedom as moral perfection. The idea is that education should provide growth without a goal. The author finds this view too individualistic and dismissive of knowledge. People live in communities which require cooperation, education must provide basic science to live in those communities effectively. From social perspective, education is more than just an opportunity for growth. It should equip with mental and moral foundation which children cannot obtain their own.
