

Sample Passage:

1)When we survey our lives and efforts we soon observe that almost the whole of our actions and desires are bound up with the existence of other human beings. 2)We notice that whole nature resembles that of the social animals. 3)We eat food that others have produced, wear clothes that others have made, live in houses that others have built. 4)The greater part of our knowledge and beliefs has been passed on to us by other people through the medium of a language which others have created. 5)Without language and mental capacities, we would have been poor indeed comparable to higher animals.

6)We have, therefore, to admit that we owe our principal knowledge over the least to the fact of living in human society. 7)The individual if left alone from birth would remain primitive and beast like in his thoughts and feelings to a degree that we can hardly imagine. 8)The individual is what he is and has the significance that he has, not much in virtue of the individuality, but rather as a member of a great human community, which directs his material and spiritual existence from the cradle to grave.

Topic Sentence:

When we survey our lives and efforts, we soon observe that almost the whole of our actions and desires are bound up with the existence of other human beings

Argument 1:

We notice that whole nature resembles that of social animals

Supporting Sentences (1st Arg):

We eat food that other have produced, wear clothes that others have made, live in the houses that others have built. The greater part of our knowledge and beliefs has been passed on to us by other people through the medium of language which others have created. Without language and mental capacities, we would have been poor indeed comparable to higher animals.

Argument 2:

We have, therefore, to admit that we owe our principal knowledge over the least to the fact of living in human society.

Supporting Sentences (2nd Arg):

The individual if left alone from birth would remain primitive and beast like in his thoughts and feelings to a degree that we can hardly imagine.

Authors' Opinion covering the whole Passage (Conclusion):

The individual is what he is and has significance that he has, not much in virtue of the individuality, but rather as a member of a great human community, which directs his material and spiritual existence from the cradle to grave.

Title: Community Living, A Demonstration to Man's Existence

We can say that a human life is driven under the influence of other people around. We are interconnected with each other socially in terms of food, clothes, the houses and even the language, a tool to differentiate us from the animals. Mainly, our knowledge is because we live in a human society and if left alone, our minds might become devil's workshop. Conclusively, living together demonstrates a man 'his existence'.
