

Role of:-

'Muhammad Ali Jinnah in Empowering Muslim Minorities'

Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah was only architect and founder of Pakistan but also an eminent member and president of the constituent Assembly. In just 10 years, from 1937 to 1947, he built a strong and confident party to challenge the intolerant and arrogant Hindu majority, who were, from the beginning, possessing all the resources and rights of the Muslim minority. When Quaid-e-Azam took the leadership of Muslim League, he found them demoralized and people without a proper leadership. He worked hard to protect the rights of the Muslim minority and that struggle resulted in a separate and an independent nation for the Muslims, named Pakistan, a land of Pure.
