

Poverty builds man characteristics

Poverty makes a man sharp. It is purify their moral values. It makes them brave and strong. Then he have courage to face difficulties of life. It is not due to their wealth. But due to their humilitism character. Therefore, Poverty is honorable, while misery is not accepted. Because it is linked with idleness. The poor people are happier than rich. Rich people are <sup>feel</sup> envious to see them happy. But it's also reality. They do not want to take their place.

Precise world. 298

Total world = 75

---

---

young ... they just seem to be propaganda masters.
pedagogy in Antiquity and Modern Age

Précis 50: PMS KP 2018

Q.2 Make a précis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title.

Nothing sharpens a people's wits like poverty. Hence many of the greatest people have originally been poor. Poverty often purifies and braces a people's morals. To spirited people, difficult tasks are usually the most delightful ones. If we may rely upon the testimony of history, people are brave, truthful, and magnanimous not in proportion to their wealth, but to their smallness of means. And the best is often the poorest – always supposing that they have sufficient to meet their temporal wants. As I said, "God has created poverty but He has not created misery". And there is certainly a great difference between the two. While honest poverty is honourable, misery is humiliating, in as much as the latter is for the most part the result of misconduct and often of idleness. Poverty is no disgrace to him who can put up with it, but he who finds the beggar's staff get warm in his hand, never does any good, rather a great amount of harm. The poor are often the happiest of people – far more so than the rich, but though they may be envied, no one will be found willing to take their place.