Nizar Hassan was born in 1960, in the village of Mashhad, near Nazareth, lived his family. He studied anthropology at Haifa University and worked in TV, then cinema. In 1994, he created a film "Independence", highlighted the Israeli's claim of the land, stolen from Palestinian. The author said that he received an email from Nizar, the successful Palestinian documentary filmmaker about his film "My grandfather's path" in which he advised of letting the anger against Zionist settler colonialists.

It could cause of losing own integrity which helped me reminding a moment of poetic salvation.

Nizar's documentary was a fine work about Israel's encroachment over Palestine rights which put Palestine in perspective.

This film was gracefully presented to his homeland. A small version of it was shown on AlJazeera in parts, but it must be full in watch without interruption.
