Title:

Love and Affection in Educational Institution.

Modern educational theorists are more in favor of restricting children with rules and less in favor of enjoying their presence. Students who are liked by teachers unconditionally becomes more obedient. It is of no use for teacher to love their student for some other purposes such as to secure a vote or for some other purpose because students are not grateful for such kind of interest. Teachers who love their students unconditionally do not interfere with their freedom until required. In educational institution teachers spend limited time with students and it is well known that student's company without restriction is tiresome. But, still, rules are not the option. They should be dealt with love and affection.
