

Traditional Family Structure Can not bear the challenges of the modern world.

① Introduction:

Thesis Statement:-

As nuclear families proliferate, traditional family patterns are evolving. However, traditional families have shown to be a pillar in overcoming global issues. Extended families today offer moral guidance and support.

② Traditional family structure has always stood still in the changing order of the world.

③ How traditional family structure has bear the challenges of the modern world.

- a) The cost of living gets controlled in living together.
- b) Physical and emotional support on rainy days.
- c) Women can pursue their career.
- d) Children get to learn ethical and moral values from their elders.
- e) Traditional family structure create cohesion and minimise deviant behavior.

④ In modern world traditional family structure can not bear the challenges.

- a) The cost of living increases as they have to look after a large group of people.
- b) Personal space gets compromised in extended families.
- c) In some traditional families women often have to leave their careers.
- d) Children usually get detriorated by their grandparents.
- e) Today, the responsibilities of traditional families are the reasons for conflict.

⑤ Traditional families have been the savior in all eras to come.

- a) The chances of living increases as extended families contribute in basic necessities.
- b) Modern day families are changing and they support emotionally.
- c) Today, extended families often support women in persuing their careers.
- d) Elders teach children about culture, values and religious aspect of the society.
- e) Society becomes healthier and less aberrant where people have a sense of responsibility.

⑥ Conclusion.