"Earthquake - The Great Destroyer"

Earthquake is the deadly enemy of mankind which has no territorial or political affiliation. The impact of an earthquake supersedes any manmade weapon and the inability of prediction further raises the threat.

An earthquake can cause havoc in a modern city and destruction in seas and mountains as well. The quake which struck Lisbon in 1755 killed 450,000, Peru in 1970 bore 50,000 casualties and in 1968, Alaska's geographical positioning was altered due to the impact. At present, scientists face the challenge of predicting origin of earthquakes to provide precaution to ensure safety.
