Idleness is not Evil

The people responsible for all this worldly evils are always up and consistently doing something, without knowing what they are actually doing. The author believes that the devil is also quite consistent in his work and in his kingdom, no one is allowed to take a break and do nothing. The author is of the opinion that, in our world it is not laziness but the lack of kindness and steady thought, that has led it to such a stage. Plenty of energy in this world is misused. If in July 1914, the governing bodies had this intense want of taking a break and doing nothing, then they should all have been better of than they are now. Even today, if the European politician ~~per~~ would put aside the notion that laziness is crime, and take a little break, they would get beneficial from it. But this notion remained unchallenged. Everytime there are religious conferences and their members instead of addressing mountain-high evils, condemn women's dresses and dance bands. They better take break and recover their mental health.
