

"Weather tends to shape man's nature"

In countries with mild temperatures, cold weather is beneficial. Cold weather, although, acts as a barrier but ~~barriers~~^{it} allows room for exercise efforts. Unlike, hot weather where there is little motive for exercise. Moderate cold allows man to make ~~of~~ necessary moves like: building warm houses, using warm clothes, cutting trees ~~and~~ digging out coal for fire, and taking care of nutrition for healthy body health. Also, man moves fast to avoid intense cold in open air. Contrarily, man in tropic doesn't make such efforts and can lay beneath the tree all day, with less care for food, clothes, ~~fire~~ and fire. Similarly, there is difference between man belonging from ~~same~~ ~~regions~~ ~~in~~ temperate and tropic areas, and their nature. Hot climate man is ~~less~~ more effortless, while in cold climate, he makes healthy use of his mind and body.
