Title: The Powers of Human Brain

The human brain, with its incredible ability to think abstractly has made the slow processes of natural evolution outdated. While animals took hundreds of thousands of years to fly, humans achieved this in just three generations. The brain has greatly expanded human senses, allowing people to observe distant objects, hear inaudible sounds and reduce physical barriers. Nature's slow methods are now surpassed by the brain's achievements. However, evolution still continues and humans now hold the responsibility to guide it. This freedom brings the choice to either progress morally and spiritually or face destruction by misunderstanding these victories. Humans must prove they are ready for this great responsibility.
