I want to be a CSP officer because it is the best job in Pakistan, providing various opportunities. I have done Bachelor of Dentistry and getting a job at a hospital as a General Dentist or a job as a demonstrator in a dental teaching institute was the hardest. CSS exam is tough ^{to pass} but there is a guarantee of employment.

The respect and prestige that come with the title of a civil servant make it worth all the hard work and dedication that go into ~~the~~ passing the exam. I spent 40,00,000 PKR on completing my degree and yet I can't make a difference in anyone's life.

As a CSP officer, I will have the opportunity to work for the people of my country. I will have a voice and ability to give input in policy making. It is a dog-eat-dog world and the situation ^{in Pakistan} is no different. There is not a single day that goes by without a news of crime happening in Pakistan. As a CSP officer, I will have the power to protect myself, my family and my people.

I will make sure that the victims get their justice and the abuser is punished.

I will have the opportunity to ^{go} abroad and study at prestigious universities which will ^{even} help me become a better individual and a better performing CSP officer.
