4. Trees give shade for the benefit of others and while they themselves stand in the sun and endure scorching heat, they produce the fruit by which others profit. The character of good men is like that of trees. What is the use of this perishable body, if no use of it is made for the benefit of mankind? Sandalwood — the more it is rubbed the more scent does it yield. Sugarcane — the more it is peeled and cut into pieces, the more juice does it produce. Gold — the more it is burnt, the more brightly does it shine. The men who are noble at heart do not lose these qualities even in losing their lives. What does it matter whether men praise them or not? What difference does it make whether riches abide with them or not? What does it signify whether they die at this moment or whether their lives are prolonged? Happen what may, those who tread in the right path will not set foot in any other. Life itself is unprofitable to a man who does not live for others. To live for the mere sake of living one's life is to live the life of dogs and cows. Those who lay down their lives for the sake of a friend, or even for the sake of a stranger, will assuredly dwell forever in a world of bliss.

~~Title: Purposeful vs non purposeful life~~ sentence 1 and 2 have the same meaning

The character of a good man is like a tree, which benefits others while standing in a sun. The life of a man should be like to a sandalwood or sugarcane, which benefit others even as it is cut into pieces or rubbed. Those who are noble at heart help others and does not concern for what others may say or do. Living solely for self is akin to lives of dogs and cows. However, those who lives for others will be awarded a life of eternal bliss.
