

I have a background of BS IR, but my inclination is much more towards political science. Still I was advised to opt IR as my optional, as political science may get this year. I am confused because after past paper analysis I am still of the opinion that I should go for political science.

Moreover, I have a confusion that either british history or indo pak history are better options. Indo pak history has a overlapping with pak affairs and I have a good grip on indo pak history as compared to british history. But, I was suggested that british history is more scoring.

Kindly, help me choosing.

Yes, you should go with IR. It'll require much less time for preparation because you'll already be familiar with most of the concepts and its scoring trend has been good as well.

Indo pak history is easier and overlaps but its scoring trend is on the average side. So, British history is a better option and it'll also overlap with IR somewhat
