Why I Want To Become Civil Servant

I want to be a civil servant officer in Pakistan since it has been best and most prestigious job in subcontinent since 18th century during colonial rule. Pakistan's civil services, first, offer more stable and secure work than private sectors. Because in private sectors there is always possibility of losing work as well as pay deduction during (sho) shutdowns, whereas civil services provide complete job security. Second, there are several programs offered for civil servants that not only allow them to study abroad at famous institutions but also advances the position of civil servants. Last but not least, civil servant is not merely 17-scaled employee, but an educated and literate individual who not only grow by training and education but also has the opportunity to (to) transform his/her nation by serving it with respect, thereby making a country a better place to live. As Nelson Mandela once famously quoted that education is the most potent weapon for transforming the world.
