Why do I want to be CSP Officer.

It is my dream to be a CSP Officer one day. Being a CSP Officer holds great benefit in my country. One gets job security in this profession. Passing a competitive exam conducted by FPSC provides one with strong legal and administrative basis for the job, unlike other jobs related to autonomous and private sector. In addition to this being a CSP provides one with opportunities to help the poor and neglected sector of the society. Most of the common folk are reluctant to approach government departments due to negative attitude of Officers. I wish to make government departments accessible to all. Along with all these aspirations I also desire social mobility. A CSP has influence in society. Such influence is necessary for me to achieve social mobility. Anatol Leiven in his book “Pakistan a negotiated state” has clearly highlighted how administrative influence plays an important role in our society. In a nutshell I wish to benefit not only myself but also the society. This can only be achieved through a federally approved secure position like a CSP.
