

Gender Equality is a myth?

ONCE an army of ants decided to challenge the hegemony of elephants in the jungle. They chose an ant among them as their leader, and under his leadership they marched towards elephant. When they reached the place of Elephant, the leader ant gave an oration in which he motivated other ants by saying that they are equal ^{just like} to all other animals of jungle. He said that the elephant consider himself as the only supreme Power but we are thousands and we have equal rights as a gender just like the Elephant. ~~They~~ Then they attacked on the Elephant; and elephant destroyed them all in a while. As the ants considered them as equal to the giant elephant but elephant destroyed them all and their notion of being equal to the giant elephant as gender vanished. This story explains how the notion of equality is not practically possible. while, in Pakistan gender equality is myth due to social ~~and economical~~ ^{and cultural} factors.

and ^{no} economic grievances which includes Poverty, unemployment, gender violence and unequal distribution of wealth.

Note: This is just the introduction of essay "Is gender equality a myth?"